Guardian Agents

For nursing home administrators

Resident turning: recorded, verified, defensible.

You carry the liability for every resident in your building. Without real oversight, that is a gamble. Today the proof that a resident was turned is a note in the chart, written after the fact, and a paper-chart checkbox is a thin defense.

Guardian Agents records every turn with a small sensor on the resident and sends the record straight into your EHR. Your DON sees every deviation as it happens and acts on it. You get peace of mind, proof on record and more beds your staff can serve.

Peace of mind

Protocols are followed and quality of care is assured, on every unit, every shift. You know it. You don't hope it.

Full oversight for your DON

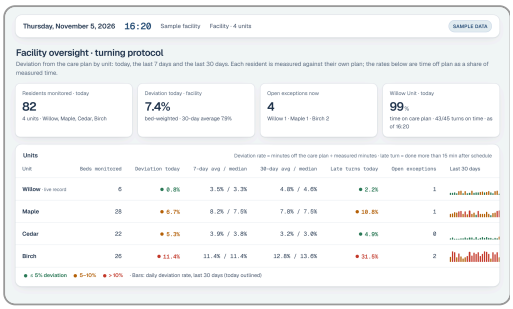

Your DON sees every deviation as it happens and closes it while it is still minor.

Proof on record

Every turn is recorded and kept, ready for surveyors, payers, insurers, families and counsel.

More beds, same staff

Less oversight load frees your nurses. Beds you could not staff become beds you can fill.

The facility view: deviation by unit for today, 7 days and 30 days, average and median, with late turns and open exceptions.

~$3,000
leakage per bed per year from pressure injuries, readmissions, clawbacks, fines and litigation

~$20
per bed per month, about $240 a year

12.5×
ROI potential, before counting the beds your staff can now serve

What is at stake

The resident
A facility-acquired pressure injury means pain, a longer stay and often a hospital transfer, which can cost the facility rehospitalization penalties and clawbacks.

The payment
Readmissions cut your Medicare payment, and managed care plans claw back what they can. Turning is the lever you control.

The survey
An F686 citation, civil money penalties and a public mark on Care Compare, read by families and referral partners.

The lawsuit
Pressure injuries are a common subject of long-term-care litigation. A timestamped turning audit trail gives your counsel facts, and your insurer proof.

No infrastructure to install
Existing Wi-Fi, a sensor and a phone

Privacy by design
No speech or video recorded or analyzed

A platform that grows
Turning first. More protocols on the same sensor.

Let's talk

We invite you to a conversation with Yogev Wallach, our founder. Come as you are.

Let's talk →

SCAN TO PICK A TIME

Yogev Wallach
Founder, Guardian Agents
yogev@guardian-agents-us.com

Guardian Agents

Questions we hear

Our budget is razor-thin. Can we afford another system?

It is designed to pay for itself many times over. One serious pressure-injury claim, around $240,000, equals the system's cost for a 100-bed facility for about ten years. The leakage you already carry per bed is more than twelve times the yearly cost, and the beds your staff can now serve come on top.

How does it fit our EHR and our IT?

Your EHR stays the chart. Guardian Agents sends the data from each paired sensor straight into it through an official marketplace integration. Your IT team enables a VPN connection and internet access. That's it.

Will my DON and CNAs see it as more work?

No. The record creates itself from the turn. No turn sheets, no reconstructing the shift, and your DON reviews exceptions on a phone instead of chasing paper.

Will staff feel watched?

The sensor is on the resident, not on staff, and records position and motion only. It records the care your team delivers: on-time turns are on the record as on-time turns.

What does the record do for us in a claim?

It is your defense. When care isn't provable, insurers and litigators assume the worst. A timestamped record of every turn and every response gives your counsel facts instead of a reconstruction.

What do we tell families?

That a small sensor records when their loved one is turned and how long each position holds, with no camera and no microphone. And you can show them, not just tell them.

Still have a question? Let's talk.

We invite you to a conversation with Yogev Wallach, our founder. Come as you are.

Yogev Wallach, founder · yogev@guardian-agents-us.com

SCAN TO PICK A TIME